A Kern County native, Viviano E. Aguilar brings with him to the practice of law the work ethic and sense of community he learned growing up in Tehachapi, CA. Viviano earned his bachelor's degree in philosophy from UCLA with an emphasis on critical thinking and logic.

Before receiving an academic scholarship to attend Loyola Law School, Los Angeles, Viviano worked in management for a leading U.S. company where he gained real-world experience with operations, collective bargaining agreements, and employment issues.

During law school, Viviano clerked at private law firms and completed internships where he provided representation to individuals and businesses before the Board of Equalization and Labor Commissioner. Outside of law school, Viviano worked as a brazilian jiu-jitsu referee, drawing on his experience and interest in the martial arts.

After passing the bar in 2015, Viviano began his career with a leading central valley workers' compensation defense firm where he represented both local employers and national insurance companies.
